Gospel - Wikipedia The four canonical gospels " Matthew, Mark, Luke and John " were written between AD 70 and 100, and are the main source of information on the life of Jesus. All four are anonymous (the modern names were added in the 2nd century), and none were written by eyewitnesses.

What Are the Gospels, and Why Are There Four of Them? Why did the church keep four gospels in the canon? But why did the church retain all four in the canon of Scripture? Matthew, Mark, and Luke are so similar" is it worth keeping all of them? The most famous early attempt to synthesize the four gospels into one is the diatessaron ("through four"), compiled by the church father Tatian around AD 170. Tatian brought portions of all four gospels together into one story. Why did God give us four Gospels? - GotQuestions.org The gospel of John, written by John the apostle, is distinct from the other three Gospels and contains much theological content in regard to the person of Christ and the meaning of faith. Matthew, Mark, and Luke are referred to as the "Synoptic Gospels" because of their similar styles and content and because they give a synopsis of the life of Christ. The Gospels Portray the Life of Jesus Christ - ThoughtCo The Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke are called the Synoptic Gospels. Synoptic means "same view" or "seeing together," and by that definition, these three books cover much the same subject matter and treat it in similar ways.

Guide to the Four Gospels | Overview Bible Traditionally penned by the apostle of the same name, Matthew is the first gospel of the four. This gospel was written for people familiar with the Old Testament, both the Law of Moses and the prophets. Matthew makes more references to the Old Testament than any other gospel.
